Melissa Carone is the IT contractor for Dominion Software that was used to count ballots in several key battleground states. Carone was sent to Detroit, Michigan on Election Day to oversee the process. Well, what she witnessed boggles the mind. She also has signed an affidavit alleging and outlining massive fraud. If what Melissa Carone outlines is true, this would explain how the ballots in Michigan were manipulated. Carone was a contracted worker for Dominion, a company providing software services for ballot-counting machines in Detroit.

Carone was sent to Detroit to provide technical support for the ballot counting process. While she was there, she noted poll workers repeatedly double scanning ballots to generate multiple votes from the same batch of ballot sheets. When she reported this to her employer, Mr. Nick Ikonomakis of Dominion, Carone was told it was not her role to review what the poll workers are doing; essentially to ignore it.

Kamala Harris Accused Of Lying & Plagiarism In Latest 'Toddler Freedom Story'

January 6, 2021

Kamala Harris is once again embroiled in a huge controversy. This time Joe Biden's running mate is being accused of lying and plagiarizing Martin Luther King, Jr.'s own testimony about a little girl attending a freedom march in the Carone states in her signed affidavit that the “tabulators” would jam 4-5 times an hour.

“The computer would put out an error that tells the worker the ballot number that was jammed and gives an option to either discard the batch or continue scanning at which the counter should discard the batch, put the issue ballot on top of the batch and rescan the entire batch,” Carone said.

“I witnessed countless workers rescanning the batches without discarding them first which resulted in ballots being counted 4-5 times,” she adds. “At approximately midnight I was called over to assist one of the counters with a paper jam and noticed his PC had a number of over 400 ballots scanned – which means one batch was counted over 8 times.”

The Dominion Software co-owner allegedly told Carone that he did not care they had a “big problem.”

“This happened countless times while I was at the TCF Center. I confronted my manager [and co-owner], Nick Ikonornakis saying how big of a problem this was, Nick told me he didn’t want to hear that we have a big problem. He told me we are here to do assist with IT work, not to run their election,” Carone alleges.

“When a worker had a ballot that they either could not read, or it had something spilled on it, they would go to a table that had blank ballots on it and fill it out,” the IT contractor explains. “They were supposed to be filling them out exactly like the one they had received but this was not the case at all. The workers would also sign the name of the person that the ballot belonged to-which is clearly illegal.”

“From my understanding, there’s supposed to be a republican and a democrat judging these ballots. I overheard numerous workers talking during shift change in which over 20 machines had two democrats judging the ballots-resulting in an unfair process,” she declared.

Scott Adams, a cartoonist who is also a huge supporter of President Trump, is one of many influencers who believes the MIT professor's claims are valid.

"Ever wonder how Trump allegedly lost support with white male voters while gaining support among minorities? Doesn't seem possible, does it," Adams posted along with this tweet by Michal Burry MD: "What if #votingsoftware #algorithms used a #weightedrace feature to transfer votes from Trump to Biden as a linear function of % Republicans in a precinct? This is the allegation of Dr. Shiva Ayyadural. Also alleged: code does not 'glitch.'"

The issue comes down to recounts. Claims or evidence of massive fraud can only be rectified by a "hand" recount. Stay tuned. Americans will never stand for this type of deceit to go unchallenged when the presidency of the United States is at stake.
